

classification of word association

SOUND

- Sound is linked to words through the study of speech sounds. Words are made up of the smallest units of sound in a language. These units are represented by letters in written language.

Modification

- Modification in word association refers to the relationship between words where one word describes, specifies, or qualifies another, providing additional information about it. This relationship can help classify word associations in various contexts. There are two main types of modifications: adjective-noun modification and adverb-verb modification.
